Downing and Calvert Vaux. The house derives its aesthetic merit from the dramatic placement of its architect- ural details and a nice sense of proportion. Two bay windows, a variety of porches and graceful exterior wood trim - large boards, brackets and drops - combine with a steep hip-roof to create a pleasing effect. An asymmetrical floor plan creates a more spacious interior than the facade would indicate and provides ample light and views of the grounds. The unknown designer of the Stowe House, built in 1871, showed the Vic- torian attention to decorative motifs and skill in creating a distinctive design. He employed a subtle combination of ele- ments of the rustic cottage with the Gothic villa, translated into brick. Restoration of the Stowe House has been made possible by the foresight and generosity of the late Miss Katharine Seymour Day, a grand-niece of Harriet Beecher Stowe. Miss Day lived in the Stowe House from 1927 until her death in 1964. In 1941 Miss Day established the Stowe-Day Memorial Library and Historical Foundation to which she bequeathed her entire estate. 1964 the Stowe-Day Foundation has carried out three major objec- tives: complete restoration of the Stowe House to its original state during Mrs. Stowe's residency, 1873 - 1896; conversion of a carriage house directly behind the Stowe House into a recep- tion center and exhibition gallery; and lastly, the development of a research library. The library, built around the nucleus of Miss Day's collection of manuscripts, books, and pamphlets, concentrates on architecture, the decorative arts, history, and literature of 1840 - 1900.
